

Bringing Careers into Focus

Cindy Black

Tuesday, March 9, 2021

9:00-10:00 a.m. MST

Career Readiness gives students the relevance they need to succeed in school. Cindy will share the things they are doing at her school that you can take back to your campus and try with your students. Her school started doing brown bag career lunches virtually, which allows them to bring in partners and also provide job connections. Cindy will share how those were rolled those, who to partner with and pros/cons. She will touch on resources and tools that they use in counseling curriculum such as Naviance, Career Pathways website, CollegeBoard, YouScience and Workforce Solutions. They also have some classes and programming at her school that supports career readiness including certification, MAPS, dual credit and internships. Hopefully, there are some tools that can support you in your work with students. Cindy will also happily answer any questions you may ask.

About Cindy Black

Originally from Wyoming, Cindy Black came to ENMU to get her education and never left. She has been a School Counselor for nearly 25 years. Cindy has worked all over the state of New Mexico and at all levels, so she has a broad perspective. College and Career Counseling is her specialty. Currently, Cindy work at Los Alamos High School, a mid-size school of about 1200 students. She has also worked to give back to her profession by presenting at numerous conferences each year. Cindy has volunteered her time to college horizons as well as NM Mesa. She was the Secondary Vice President for NMSCA for many years. Currently, she serves as the NM Delegate and Secretary for Rocky Mountain Association of College Admissions Counselors (RMACAC).
